Miss Latirop said that the bureau would also devote much time to the compiling of the statistics on infant more taility. Investigations will be instituted of determine the causes of the high mortality rates among infants, and literature on the subject will be compiled for circulation. Miss Lathrop said that about 1,000 infants under one year of age die every year in the United States. She said that the lives of half of this number could be saved if proper care were given the bables. It is expected that the efforts of the bureau will in time the claim of the high mortality rate.

Practically all questions affecting the welfare of the child will be investigated with the published, containing all of the juvenile courts in the country, together with the names of the officials, surposes of the methods used, results obtained, laws in effect, and contemplated changes in legislation and administration.

The bureau at present has fifteen employes. It is expected that it will gradually grow as the work expands. Miss Lathrop, the director, receives a salary of 8,000 a year. Although the bill providing for the establishment of the bureau was approved April 3, 1912, the appropriation for the work did not become available until the latter part of August. This seriously delayed the work of the quartered in the Department of Commerce and Labor annex in Louisian Avenue but, Monday offices were moved to the Victor Building.

Section 2 of the bill providing for the establishment of the bureau explains the work to be undertaken by the office in the following words:

The said bureau shall investigate

New York in Interest of Heirs of Louis Spauldine, Who Died in 1875.

An unsigned will dated August 7, 1875, and dictated by a Union soldier on his death at Port Barraneas, Fla., took Dr. Belva Lockwood to Lockport, N. Y., recently in trace of the largest mysteriously missing item, a legacy of 20,000. While unable to locate the money, which was said to be on deposit in a Lockport savings bank, or even the base of the largest mysteriously in the capital in a Lockport savings bank, or even the base of the capital in confident that the money for the rightful heirs.

On August 5, 1875, Louis Spauldine, a Union soldier of the civil war, dictated his last will and testament to four interests while dying in a government, hospital of yellow fever.

He made his will in favor of his sister. Delta Spauldine, devising to her his government, and 20,000 on deposit in a Lockport savings bank. The bank book covering this amount beling placed upon the will. She died about three years after her brother, leaving four duals Green, or Grun, as the name is in German.

The sister never tried to collect upon the will. She died about three years after her brother, leaving the has brother's head married and four daughters had been born. She died about three years after her brother, leaving his unsigned testament as a legacy to her daughters and and preport to said department upon all matters are refrainted to the capital of the banks and will probably soon undertake another trip to Lockwond.

It was announced yesterday that the Health Department will ask the Department of Agriculture to institute proceedings in the State courts under the pure food and drug act against producers shipping milk to Washington below the standard.

A case now pending in the Court of Appeals handicaps the Health Department in its prosecution on dealers in the District.

Bacteriological examinations of milk samples will probably be conducted by the Department of Agriculture, and when an excessive number of organisms is found, proceedings in the Federal courts of Virginia and Maryland will be instituted.
